

SINGLE STREAM RECYCLING

Recycling benefits everyone, and although it is beneficial, it is not always as easy as throwing your waste away. We understand how difficult and time consuming it can be for our consumers to bundle and separate all of their recyclables each week. That is why we have adopted a new recycling method, Single Stream Recycling. This innovative process allows the consumer to have the freedom of commingling all of their recyclables, putting all recyclables unbundled in one container. Single Stream Recycling is a process that benefits the consumer, the planet and the recycling removal company.

The goal of Single Stream Recycling is to make recycling easier for the consumers and the recycling removal companies. Reducing your duty of sorting the recyclables might result in more recyclables going into your recycling container. The goal for 2009 is for Americans to recycle 25% of their refuse.

Below is an example of what the toter will look like.
